We have no do it that, when the proper time comes the Democrats of Cumberland and Adams will be glad to discuss with their brethren in York the question of changing the rotation system of making Congressional nominees. If it seems advisable to make a change, and a fair method of representation can be determined upon, we do not think that any Democrats of the three counties will interpose any objections, but will rather gladly do whatever is in their power to best.

The York Gazette, in the expression what it considers an argument in favor of the change, really states an objection to it. The following is the Gazette's idea: "which each county shall have one delegate to each five hundred or one thousand votes." Theoretically, the forming of one district out of the three county lines to be obtained, may be a good, but, practically, is it at all likely, it will result in an equitable representation? Counting by the thousand votes York county would have twice out of the twenty delegates, while Adams county, which is in reason, likely, that a Cumberland or Adams county candidate would have an equal standing before the nominating convention, in a York county man can, anyone, say that country's feeling would be so far forgotten as to give any other candidate than one from York any of York's delegates? In theory, possibly, in practice, certainly not. Would not such a plan, in all probability result in a virtual monopoly for the controlling county of the district? The only unspoken candidate before the Democracy of Adams county as yet is Mr. Benner. Would he have an equal chance with Mr. Ziegler, York's avowed candidate? Can our York brethren presume to answer that question affirmatively? This consideration—equitable representation—is of vast importance.

All things which have been well done have been accomplished by even-handed compromise. The opinions of fair and reasonable men can always be brought together, forcing a man to take a middle ground. The one inherent spirit must enter into the decision of this question that it may be finally settled to the ultimate benefit of the Democratic party of York, Cumberland and Adams counties.

With a little thought it will be seen that the Gazette's claim to magnificence is nonsense. It states that by the rotation system the right to make the next nomination belongs to York, but that York will relinquish the privilege to the end that the system may be changed. In the first place does the right now belong to York? In the second, wherein is the sacrifice when already the Democrats of York have their settled candidate and have their organization so in hand that the delegates would vote as one man for that choice? He would be nominated in all certainty whether York takes her turn or the couplet as a disk or make a nomination which will be agreeable to all concerned.

NINE seasons out of ten the earlier after the middle of February that grass and clover seed is sown the better will be the crop. There is never much chance for seed to germinate in February in our Northern States, but if it is put on the ground when the surface is frozen its thawing and freezing will cover the seed better than it can be done by any implement. There is a possibility that with a very early spring and a late frost the clover seed will start to grow and be nipped. But we have never seen such a case. The clover is more apt to germinate, and, not being covered with soil, it does not get root hold enough to stand through when it comes, as it is very apt to do, in either of these.

Many people are willing to pay for appearance in butter as well as in other things, and it pays, in marketing butter, to put it up in neat packages. The best is made from cream which is ripened uniformly, and the dairymen who undertake to do without an ice house is working along wrong lines. Above all, he must know the capabilities of his cows individually, or there will be a leak for every item of profit, and he be in ignorance as to why he reaps no reward for all his labor, and disgusted with life in general. In these times the doing of one's best is the only path which leads from failure.

LAND plaster was formerly used on every farm, and it is none the less valuable at the present time. As a dressing for clover early in the spring it is excellent, and it is one of the cheapest substances that can be used.

From 10 to 12 pounds of clover seed has been considered a large application on an acre of land, and the high price of seed has not encouraged farmers to exceed that quantity; but more failures occur from not using much seed every year than the average, as a large portion may be inferior, destroyed by birds, or lost from exposure and other causes.

In the spring, and somewhat early, the peach trees should be trimmed and all dead wood removed. The peach tree is one that can endure severe cutting back; but it seems to thrive best when kept clear of all superfluous wood, and soon sends out new branches for the next year. The roots of peach trees are sometimes attacked by insects before an inexperienced grower is aware of it, and "jennification" should be made early, using strong arsenicals as a remedy sometimes within a brief period.

Poultry can be produced and maintained at a less cost than can sheep or swine, and the meat of poultry is much healthier for consumption than is swine meat. The time was when poultry was looked on as a very small business, but many have found it the most paying business of all for meat production.

The scattering trees that grow by roadside and fence corners are usually much tougher wood than trees of the same variety that grew up in the original forest. Exposed to sunlight and severe winds it is toughens the fibers of such trees. Oak trees which have grown up in these ways are especially valuable, as they are highly valued for their toughness. It will pay farmers who have such timber to make inquiries, and with a little trouble they can probably find a good market for it.

If a farm is run down in condition there is no better plan than to turn one's attention to dairying, because in producing butter less of soil is removed. There should be a choice to feed with reference to the manure product and all the liquid manures should be caught and preserved as valuable. Let there be some good aeration to fix the ammonia in the liquids; none better than land plaster.

A WESTERN wheat grower writes that where the ground is packed by the horses turning at the edge of the field there the strongest wheat grows, determined to try the effect of turning his cattle into his field immediately after seeding. Of course, this was done only when the soil was quite dry. He liked the plan so well that he habitually followed it thereafter.

The farmer who undertakes to make farming pay by hiring a man while he directs must have plenty of capital and if the farm is small he should not expect large returns. On small farms the labor of the farmers who own them is a large item to be estimated.

The stalls cannot be dry unless they are arranged with the object of affording perfect drainage. Absorbent material will assist in keeping the animals dry during the night, but when the bed is very wet, and the liquids are allowed to accumulate, the animals will suffer severely if the weather is cold, and cows will shrink in their milk. Comfort and rest are essential to their, and it will cost less to keep the stock dry than it will to give extra food to create animal heat.

The time to begin selecting seed for next year is not at harvesting, out when beginning spring operations. The plants should be observed from the time they are harvested until they bear seed, and order to secure the earliest blossoming plants as well as those which are most of growth and production. Know which plants the seeds came from in better than buying perfect seed without a knowledge of the plants which produced them.

The demand for choice mutton has largely increased during the past five years. The introduction of the mutton breeds on farms has added to the quality of the meat, which educated consumers to the use of that which before could not be obtained. It is doubtful if any farmer who has made a speciality of mutton sheep would go back to the wool breeds, even if wool sold at double the present price.

Horses are cheap and it is an excellent opportunity for farmers to buy better stock and thus to secure larger profit without additional cost for food and labor.

Sheep and wool have held their own in the past year, in price, better than cattle, hogs or grain—but in fact than almost any farm product except hay and butter. It is not a good time let the sheep go.

The best time to sow plaster is early in the spring, so as to let the rains wash the plater into the soil. It may be sown later in the season on clover, when the plants are suffering from lack of moisture. It is also excellent to use in stables, and to make manure heaps when they are fermenting. Plaster absorbs ammonia and is then converted into sulphate of ammonia, which is a very stimulating fertilizer.
